RESEARCH GRANTS (EXTRAMURAL)

FUNDED PROPOSALS

Delineating Hispanic Immigrants' Allostatic Load Dynamics through Simulation Modeling
Role: Principal Investigator (Co-PI: Yorghos Apostolopoulos)

Source: NIMHHD, NIH, R15
Grant Period: 1/2019 - 12/2021
Amount: $470,425

PROPOSALS UNDER REVIEW ($977,566)

Preparing the US Labor Force for Future Jobs in the Hotel and Restaurant Industry: A Hybrid Framework and Multi-stakeholder Approach

Role: Co-Principal Investigator (PI: Yan A. Huang)

Source: NSF RAISE: C-Accel Pilot - Track B1

Submitted: June 2019 (proposal # 150805653)

Amount: $977,566

PROPOSALS PLANNED FOR FUTURE SUBMISSION

The Role of Vacation Travel and Leisure Activities in Preventing Cardiovascular Disease Risk in the Mediterranean

Role: Principal Investigator (Co-PI: Yorghos Apostolopoulos)

Source: European Commission (DG Enterprise and Industry, Tourism Unit; DG Health and Consumer Protection, Public Health Unit)

Planned submission date: 2020

Objectives: While interventions have not produced desired outcomes, CVD is responsible for 30-40% of mortality in the Mediterranean. This investigation focuses on how vacation travel can enhance our understanding of CVD pathogenesis by uncovering whether it can have a moderating impact on the “causes of causes” of CVD (distress, depression, diet, physical inactivity) that affect risk aetiology (LDL-C, triglycerides, and BP). It will be a prospective study of two cohorts (vacationers vs. non-vacationers) from diverse demographics of European, Asian, and African countries of the Mediterranean.

Mapping Health and Safety Risks in Popular Coastal Mediterranean Resorts

Role: Principal Investigator (Co-PI: Yorghos Apostolopoulos)

Source: European Commission (DG Enterprise and Industry, Tourism Unit; DG Health and Consumer Protection, Public Health Unit)

Planned submission date: 2020

Objectives: To (a) ascertain how sociocultural, spatial, epidemiological, psychosocial, network, behavioral and demographic factors place vacation travelers, locals, stakeholders, and their relationship partners/family members at risk for their health and safety and (b) develop a monitoring and surveillance system to operate as preventive mechanism (early warning system) for individuals (mass tourists and cruise ship tourists) and destinations.

Diversification of Mediterranean Tourism Products: How Joint Ventures of Health Care and Tourism Sectors can Boost Sustainability

Role: Principal Investigator (Co-PI: Yorghos Apostolopoulos)

Source: European Commission (DG Enterprise and Industry, Tourism Unit)

Planned submission date: 2020

Objectives: Within a context of declining mature tourist destinations, several coastal and marine tourist destinations in the Mediterranean have started exploring novel approaches to tourism product diversification. This investigation will examine the feasibility of joint ventures between health care and tourism sectors for the systematic development of wellness and medical tourism and health farms in destinations with developed medical and tourism infrastructures. These ventures will combine medical, touristic, wellness and relaxation, and dietary-based (Mediterranean diet) approaches.

PROPOSALS SUBMITTED (NOT FUNDED)

Developing a Scientifically Viable and Socially Acceptable Model of Water Friendly Landscaping Practices for Commercial and Public Use in Florida

Role: Co-Principal Investigator (PI: Asli Tasci)

Source: USDA/Agriculture and Food Research Initiative (AFRI) ($5,080,000)

Submitted: August 2017 (proposal #12460307)

RESULT: Not funded.

Modeling the Sociostructural Determinants of Commercial Drivers' Syndemics

Role: Co-Investigator (PI: Yorghos Apostolopoulos)

Source: NHLBI, NIH R01 (~$2,000,000)

Submitted: June 2013

Objectives: To disentangle the complex and dynamic web of causation of truckers' cardiometabolic disease (CMD). Grounded in systems and syndemics thinking, the study will collect multimarker data to compensate for gaps in understanding the role of work conditions in truckers' CMD, and triangulate these data with archival data on trucking organization and trucker health along with input from occupational health and trucking experts to conduct system-dynamic modeling to uncover the dynamic complexity of truckers' CMD.

RESULT: No impact score, not funded.

Delineating Commercial Drivers' Cardiometabolic Disease through System-Dynamics Modeling

Role: Co-Investigator/Project Director (PI: Yorghos Apostolopoulos)

Source: NHLBI, NIH R15 (US$430,500)

Submitted: June 2012

Objectives: Grounded in systems-science thinking methodologies, truckers (N=500) will be recruited for multimarker cross-sectional data collection (surveys, biometrics, specimens) to elucidate the dynamic and complex pathways among multiple, interacting components and underlying mechanisms of truckers' cardiometabolic disease.

RESULT: Received high impact score of 30, not funded.

Pathways to Commercial Drivers' Obesity-Associated Comorbidities

Role: Co-Investigator/Project Director (PI: Yorghos Apostolopoulos)

Source: NHLBI, NIH R01 (US$3,550,000)

Submitted: June 2011

Objectives: Two cohorts (local, long-haul) of a total of 1,200 truckers will be enrolled for three waves of multimarker data collection (surveys, biometrics, specimens) to assess how continued exposure to the trucking work environment affects truckers' incidence and progression of weight gains, obesity-associated comorbidities, accident and crash risks, and diminished work performance.

RESULT: Received good comments but no impact score, not funded.

FUNDED RESEARCH (COMPLETED)

Environmental, Sociopolitical, and Public Health Threats to Tourism in Middle Eastern and Eastern Mediterranean Destinations (Case of Turkey, Cyprus, Israel, and the UAE)

Role: Co-Investigator (PI: Antonis Theocharous, Co-Is: Yorghos Apostolopoulos, Yoel Mansfeld, Ariel Reichel, Cevat Tosun)

Source: Security Program, European Union, 7th Program Framework ($425,000)

Period: 2009-2013

Objectives: Project explored environmental (natural disaster), sociopolitical (crime, terrorism), and public health threats in Turkey, Cyprus, Israel, and the UAE and investigated how regional capacities can be used to improve safety and security for international travelers in Middle Eastern and Eastern Mediterranean regions and what mitigation strategies can be developed by strengthening existing plans to reduce the magnitude of adverse effects while enhancing strategic collaborations and devise surveillance systems to operate as early warning systems to improve efficacy of mitigation strategies.

Indigenous Institutions, Social Networks and HIV Risks in the Borana Region of Ethiopia

Role: Co-PI (Co-PI: Yorghos Apostolopoulos)

Source: Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC-04IPA07551)

Period: 2004-2005 (US$200,000)

Objectives: To examine how indigenous institutions, family social structuring, gender relations, compromised health, medical-care interventions, population mobility, conditions in transit and border milieux, conditions in urban/rural settings, and social-network structures render populations vulnerable to the acquisition and dissemination of sexually transmitted and bloodborne infections, including HIV.

Trucker Networks, Drug Use, and Disease Transmission

Role: Co-PI and Project Director (Co-PI: Yorghos Apostolopoulos)

Source: NIH (National Institute for Child Health and Human Development) (R01-HD042972-01)

Period: 2002-2006 (US$1.2 million)

Objectives: To study the sex and drug exchanges among social and risk networks of American long-haul truckers and their potential role in the acquisition and dissemination of sexually transmitted and bloodborne infections. This comprises the first such research effort in North America on disease diffusion risks of mobile populations.

Mobility Project: Sustainable Tourism in Mexico

Role: Co-PI (Co-PI: Carlton Yoshioka)

Source: U.S. Department of Education, Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education (FIPSE)

Period: 1996-1999 (US$300,000)

Objectives: Developed a consortium of three universities across the U.S. and Mexico to provide educational opportunities in sustainable/ecotourism education and initiate faculty and student exchange between the countries.

Demand for a Meeting Facility in Williams, Arizona

Role: Co-PI (Co-PI: Kathleen Andereck)

Source: Arizona Department of Commerce, Rural Tourism Development

Period: 1996

Objectives: Explored market demand for the development of meeting facilities in a small town (Williams) in rural Arizona.

RESEARCH GRANTS (INTERNAL)

COMPLETED ($225,570)

Well on the Way: An Exploratory Study on Occupational Health in Hospitality

Role: Co-Investigator (Co-PIs: Tingting Zhang, Edwin Torres)

Period: 2017-2018

Amount: $10,000

Objectives: To explore optimal wellness programs for hospitality workers..

Exploring Impacts of School Lunch Programs on Child Health and Academic Performance: Case of Orange County, Florida

Role: Co-Investigator (Co-PIs: Bendegul Okumus, Jeanette Garcia, Co-Is: Kevin Murphy)

Period: 2017-2018

Amount: $10,000

Objectives: To investigate impacts of school lunch programs on child health and academic performance.

Millenials' Nutritional Awareness, Eating Behavior and Restaurant Selection Criteria

Role: Co-Investigator (PI: Bendegul Okumus, Co-Is: Ahmet Ozturk)

Period: 2016-2017

Amount: $7,500

Objectives: To investigate Millenials' nutritional awareness and behaviors.

Eating on the Street: How Safe is Street Food for Locals and Tourists in Orlando?

Role: Co-Principal Investigator (PI: Bendegul Okumus, Co-Is: Griff Parks, Sean Moore)

Period: 2016-2017

Amount: $2,500

Objectives: To investigate the food handling and safety practices of street food vendors (food trucks) in Orlando to explore safety management measures in place for both local and tourist consumers.

Period: 1995-1996
Amount: $5,000

RESEARCH FOCUS

- Health Protective and Preventive Role of Vacations: (1) Meaning of vacations and quality of life within broader demographic, epidemiological, nutritional, and psychosocial trends affecting society; (2) Beneficial effects of travel and tourism (annual vacations) on mental (e.g., stress, depression, burnout) and physical health (e.g., hypertension, coronary heart disease); and (4) Work-life balance, restorative role of vacations, government mandated vacations, and US labor policy.
- Travel and Tourism Health Risk Management and Mitigation: (1) Preventive interventions to reduce health risks for travelers and locals who interact with them and health education to reduce/manage high-risk tourism activities (e.g., rave tourism, sex tourism); (2) Risk mitigation and management of nightlife venues in tourism settings; (3) Immigrant health issues in tourist destinations; (4) Social and risk networks of travelers; and (5) Risks for acquisition and diffusion of endemic (e.g., dengue fever, malaria), water- and food-borne (e.g., diarrhea), emerging (e.g., SARS, avian influenza), and behavioral-risk-based diseases (e.g., STIs/HIV, alcohol/drug misuse).
- Occupational Health of Tourism/Hospitality Sector Employees: Focus on burnout, macro/micro-level stress, sleep deprivation due to shift work, exposure to second hand smoke, and air quality experienced by tourism and hospitality sector employees and mobile occupational groups. Issues of high turnover, emotional labor, migrant labor in accommodations sector (e.g., hotel housekeepers, foodservice staff, attraction workers). Work also includes examination of health risks, risk-taking behaviors of social networks in the context of occupational mobility (namely commercial vehicle drivers, HIV/STI risks, and substance use).
- Health, Risk, and Destination Sustainability: (1) Environmental health and destination sustainability: crowding and congestion; transport and air quality; climate change, tsunamis and desertification; and resource depletion and conservation; (2) Tourism product diversification to move away from the conventional mass tourism paradigm toward alternative tourism via small-scale, eco-friendly development based on health concepts (e.g., wellness tourism, medical tourism, health farms, agritourism); and (3) Negative impacts of certain types of tourism activity (e.g., spring break, clubbing tourism) on destination sustainability.

RESEARCH SKILLS

- Complex-systems methodologies and analytical tools: Nonlinear complex systems paradigms, theories, methodologies and analytical tools including system-dynamics and agent-based modeling and simulation along with social network analysis; network driven sampling (chain link, RDS).
- Traditional (linear) quantitative methodologies and analytical tools: Instrument design, development, and testing; survey instrument administration (interviewer-administered personal, telephone, mail, and online techniques); Computer-Assisted Personal Interview (CAPI) and Audio-Computer-Assisted Self Interview (ACASI) surveys; diverse sampling techniques; bivariate, multivariate, and multilevel statistical data analysis (SAS, SPSS).
- Qualitative methodologies and analytical tools: Ethnographic methods (observation, sociospatial mapping, focus groups and interviews); recruitment, enrollment, and data collection from hard-to-reach and other populations; sampling (snowball, social network, RDS); management of field-research teams; coding and data analysis (NVivo, Nud*ist).
- Biomarkers and anthropometry: Experience in collection and organization of specimens for infectious and chronic diseases (blood chemistries and lipids, urinalysis, etc.); collection and evaluation of anthropometric and other biometric markers.

TEACHING

My 25+ years of university-level teaching experience have been a rewarding and vital part of my work. I have been able to develop an excellent rapport with students with diverse sociocultural and ethnic backgrounds and have been rewarded with consistently outstanding teaching evaluations. I have had the challenge of presenting both required and elective courses to graduate and undergraduate students in settings ranging from a very small number of students to numbers exceeding 100. I have successfully used interactive-lectures and group learning methods and have incorporated a variety of media—including printed course materials, textbooks, audio and video cassettes, television programs and films, websites, and CDs/software programs. In addition, I have used Blackboard and

Canvas/Webcourse as course management platforms to post class materials, deliver tests, and hold online discussions with my students.
